Recover Lost Software Activation Keys More Easily

The activation keys are usually recorded on the original CD disks. Too many times people wind up not remembering where they put them. And no original CD means no new copy of the software can be installed onto the computer. But Recover Keys from Recover-keys.com knows how to get the lost key back without CD!

Recover Keys today announces the immediate availability of Recover Keys 1.0, which offers a very simple way to recover lost activation keys for over 120 most popular applications, or back up the keys to installed software by saving them to a file or printing. The program will pay for itself the very moment an activation key is lost as engaging someone to recover the key is very costly and often ineffective but with Recover Keys (19.95 US) it can be pretty much a snap.

Recovery of lost activation keys has never been that easy and straight forward. To begin, you install Recover Keys on PC. Running the program displays its main window with a listing of all found activation keys, as well as registration information for the products, which includes username, company, product ID, plus authentication key. In the demo version, the program displays only the first four characters. Running the program is pretty much you need to do. Then you can copy the key, or export the data to HTML, TXT, CSV, or print it.

Recover Keys will recover activation keys to over 120 software products, including such popular as Microsoft Windows, Microsoft Office, Adobe Photoshop, Adobe Illustrator Corel Draw, Macromedia Dreamweaver, Macromedia Flash, Registry Mechanic, Partition Magic, Sound Forge, Camtasia Studio, and Ulead Video Studio. The complete list of supported software is available at http://recover-keys.com/supported_software.php.

Some other important features in Recover Keys include a search through data which is especially convenient if the listing is too long, an auto-updater that will keep the program and its database of supported software always up-to-date. The database continues to grow rapidly.

If you remember the pain of losing a CD with an activation key to Windows or Adobe Photoshop, you already know that's something you don't want to happen again. So make sure you get you hands on Recover Keys. The $19.95 download version will save you untold dollars and avoided aggravation. Be a smart user and let Recover Keys do the recovery job for you!
